WORKSHOP CONTENT

The Department of Sociology of University College, in co-operation with the Urban Studies Center of the University, continues the University's program of education in human relations with this Workshop which is designed for those who have had previous workshop experience or experience in intergroup relations in the community. Each year the workshop centers around a special problem in intergroup relations.

This year the group will consider the problems of intergroup relations deriving from the growth of cities and suburban areas. The problems created by changing neighborhoods, adjustment of recent migrants, and the development of balanced neighborhoods will be analyzed and discussed. The special economic, social, and psychological impact of urban development and the problems and approaches of the various proposals for urban renewal will be considered so that each member working in a team with others of similar interest can seek creative solutions which will aid him when he returns to his community.

WORKSHOP STAFF

The Workshop will be directed by Dr. Morton J. Sobel, a specialist on Human Relations now with the staff of the Anti-Defamation League. Dr. Sobel has taught in schools and colleges throughout the country and has received numerous awards for his contributions to the field of human relations.

Associated with Dr. Sobel in the direction of the Workshop will be Marshall Stalley, assistant director of the Urban Studies Center at Rutgers. Mr. Stalley is a specialist in urban planning, redevelopment, and human relations. He directed an eight-year redevelopment project in downtown Pittsburgh, and has served in various capacities connected with social welfare and city planning.

The directors will be assisted by the staff of the Urban Studies Center at Rutgers whose members are specialists in the problems of city and suburban life. The staff includes sociologists, economists, political scientists, and city planners who will assist in the analysis of the problem within their special fields of competence.

ORGANIZATION

Experts in the field will serve as consultants and resource personnel. Group discussion, together with demonstration and practice of techniques, will be used as methods of instruction. When applicable, excursions to examine intergroup projects of current interest will be undertaken.

WORKSHOP SCHEDULE

Sunday, July 22, Opening Session 6:00 p.m.
Monday through Friday the sessions begin:
Morning, 9:00; Afternoon, 1:30; Evening, 8:00. Closing Session, 12:00 noon, July 28.

LIVING ACCOMMODATIONS

The Workshop in Modern Trends will be held on the campus of Rutgers College. Participants, both men and women, will be housed in a dormitory especially suited and chosen for workshop purposes. Dormitory residence is a requirement of the Workshop and, therefore, acceptance of a participant's application automatically includes a dormitory reservation.

Meals are served cafeteria style in the University Commons, where participants in the Workshop customarily eat as a group.

APPLICATIONS

All applicants for this workshop must complete the Request Blank found in this brochure. All questions should be answered completely. The Request Blank should be sent to the Director of the Summer Session, Rutgers - The State University, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Upon receipt of a completed Request Blank, the applicant will be sent a Summer Session Application Card which must then be completed and mailed directly to the Summer Session Office.

CREDIT

Satisfactory completion of the Workshop will entitled the participant to one credit hour, unless he has registered "Not-for-Credit." The applicability of this credit toward a program being pursued at an institution other than Rutgers should be determined by an appropriate official of that institution in advance of the student's enrollment at Rutgers.

GRADUATE CREDIT

a) If graduate credit is desired by students affiliated with other graduate schools the Summer Session Application Card must be accompanied by a statement from the Dean of the school in which the applicant is a student. The statement should attest to the student's status as a graduate student and should state that this course is part of his approved program.

b) A student seeking GRADUATE CREDIT as a student in any of the graduate schools of Rutgers University must have prior approval of the dean of that school and must have been formally admitted to that School as a graduate student. Necessary instructions and additional application forms for students seeking admission to graduate studies should be obtained from the Director of Admissions or, in the case of the Graduate School of Education, from the Assistant Dean of the Graduate School of Education.
